

ACTIVITIES

HDCA is a volunteer-run organization. If you would like to be active in your area, please check one or more of these boxes and we will send you further information.

I am interested in more information about how to:

- promote HDCA in my university or among colleagues
- help update the website from time to time
- make a tax-deductible contribution to HDCA
- contribute to the bibliography in one area
- update the website in one non-English language annually
- translate the website into a new language
- become involved in the Latin American HDCA group
- start a sub-association in my region
- become involved in a thematic group on:

- Children's Capabilities
- Capability Approach and Education Network
- Empowerment & Collective Capabilities
- Ethics and Development
- Graduate Student Network
- Health and Disability
- Horizontal Inequalities
- Human Rights
- Indigenous Peoples
- Participatory Methods
- Quantitative Research Methods
- Religion & Culture
- Sustainable Human Development
- Technology & Design

- start a new thematic group
- contribute to HDCA events, or respond to requests for teaching
- draft a briefing on my research area for the website
- post a chapter or paper on the HDCA website for comment
- contribute occasionally to the HDCA newsletter, Maitreyee
- correspond with or mentor a student working in my area
- contribute in another way (please suggest)

Our deepest gratitude to our Past and Founding Presidents:
Amartya Sen, Martha Nussbaum and Frances Stewart

The HDCA sincerely thanks IDRC, the Pardee Center/Boston University, UNDP/HDRO, and all HDCA members for their support

human development and capability association

President: Kaushik Basu

2011-2012

“The capability approach provides the intellectual foundation for human development. This approach considers human well-being, participation and freedom to be central economic and social objectives.”

Founding President: Amartya Sen

MISSION The Human Development and Capability Association (HDCA) shall promote high quality research in the interconnected areas of human development and capability. It shall be concerned with research across a broad range of topics where the human development and capability approaches have made and can make significant contributions, including the quality of life, poverty, justice, gender, development and environment inter alia. It shall further work in all disciplines such as economics, philosophy, political theory, sociology and development studies where such research is, or may be, pursued. While primarily an academic body, the Association shall bring together those involved in academic work with practitioners who are involved in, or interested in, the application of research from the fields of human development and capability to the problems they face.

Maitreyee Newsletter

The Maitreyee, our substantive electronic newsletter, is published twice a year and facilitates interaction between HDCA members. The Maitreyee is a rich resource for anyone interested in justice, equity, the common good, and more equitable economic frameworks.

Journal of Human Development and Capabilities: A Multi-Disciplinary Journal for People-Centered Development

This journal is a peer reviewed journal launched in January 2000 to provide new perspectives on challenges of human development, capability expansion, and poverty eradication, human well being, markets, growth, social justice and human rights. Development is more than about economic growth. It is also about improving the well being of people, and expanding the choices and opportunities they have. Development policies cut across economic, social and political issues. The Journal publishes original work in economics, philosophy, social sciences and other disciplines that expand concepts, measurement tools and policy alternatives. It provides a forum for an open exchange of ideas among a broad spectrum of policy makers, and academics. It addresses issues at global, national and local levels. Human development is becoming a 'school of thought' for alternative economic approaches, and the Journal acts as a conduit for members and critics of this school.

2012 CONFERENCE

The HDCA was launched in 2004 at Pavia Italy; the 2005 Conference occurred in Paris, France; 2006 in Groningen, The Netherlands; 2007 in New York, USA; 2008 in New Delhi, India; 2009 in Lima, Peru; 2010 in Amman, Jordan; 2011 in Delft, Netherlands and the 2012 International Conference will be held in Jakarta, Indonesia.

HDCA RESOURCES

If the writings of Amartya Sen and Martha Nussbaum and others in human development have caught your imagination, our web-site www.hd-ca.org is a place to learn more, to encounter other people working in the field, to find related working groups, and to connect with an intellectual and policy community. We invite you to become part of this growing online network of academics, practitioners, and students.

This interactive site has:

- a comprehensive collection of bibliographic resources on the capability approach
- unpublished manuscripts
- briefings on core concepts and applications of the human development and capability approach
- information on thematic groups and the possibility to join
- links to related institutions
- conference and event announcements
- past issues of the Maitreyee - newsletter of the HDCA
- resources on capabilities including videos, reading lists, databases, literature guides
- members-only resources

The site represents the virtual tearoom of a truly global network of people interested in human development and the capability approach. Please come, connect, and contribute.
